The reason why Hongkong and Sincapore differ from other ports in respect of Sunday work is simply that they have no Custom-house. - Even in Australia KNUTSFORD says that so far as he is aware there is no Act prohibiting Sunday labour. It does not take place to any extent, firstly, because the Custom-house is closed on that day, and secondly, because the men themselves decline to work There popular feeling is naturally in favour of the observance of Sunday, but here the number of those who either on religious or social grounds entertain the same feeling bears but an insignificant proportion to the number of non-Christian Chinamen who would be affected by it. THE MISER'S DIAMOND NECKLACE

In the year 1740 there lived in the Latin quarter in Paris a fundus miser mamed Jean Avere. The woulth consealed in the obscure cokery where he resided was balraved to be sabulous, and was no doubt really very great necklace of immense value. This he concealed so carefully that he ultimately forgot its hiding. place himself. He sought diligently for weeks, and, failing to find it. became almost insane. This rendered him even less capable of remembrance, and he took to his bed broken in body as in mind. A few weeks later a doctor and an old woman, who had sometimes done odd jobs about his house, were both at his bed-side, seeing that the end was near. As the clock in the neighbouring tower tolled one, he ceased his low muttering and sat up and shricked, "I remenber where it is now. I can put my hand on the necklace. For God's sake let me go for it before I forget it again!" Here his wankness and excitement overcame him, and he sank back among his rage, stone dead. Physicians and students are familiar with these sudden outflashings of memory at the great crisis of an episode in the humble career of a Signalman. Andrew Agge, who may be found on duty in his box at Culgaith, a little station on the blid land, twenty-three miles south of Carliele. Mr. Agge is on duty nearly every day, and must break his fast without leaving his post. The confinement and mental strain tell on the system. The strongest men cannot stand it long without feeling its effects. It makes one think of the passionate exclamation in Tom. Hood's "Song of the Shirt," "Oh, God! that bread should be so dear, And flesh and blood so cheap. Our friend had been at the same work for years, although he was only thirty five these lines were written. In 1884 he began to feel that he was about to break down; "I don't know what ails me," he would say, but I can't eat." What he forced down produced no sense of estisfaction or strength Sometimes he was alarmed at finding he could scarcely walk on account of giddiness. He said to himself, "What if I should be seized with this at some moment when there is trouble on the line, and I need all my wits about me ?"

Other features of this ail ment were pains in the chest and sides, costiveness, yellow skin and eyes, had taste in the mouth, risings of foul gas in the throat, &c. The doctor said Agge must give up his confining work or risk utter disability. He could not. Wife and children were in the way. buyers So he remained at his post and grew worse. But $50 38 p. ct. dis , seliers his work was always right, telegrams were properly received and sent, and no train got into trouble through any neglect or fault of his. His disease indigestion and dyspepsis—took a step further, and brought on kidney and bladder trouble. The doctor, at Appleby, said, "Mr. Agge, you are polyoned with the foul stuff in your stomach and blood." His doom seemed to be sealed. It was like a death warrant. Six months more rolled by. On duty one morning he was attacked with so great and so sharp a distress he could neither sit nor stand. He says: " I tumbled down on that locker and lay there all the forencon. Signals might be given, the telegraph needla might click, but I heeded them no more than a man in the grave beeds the beating of the rain againt his own tombstone."

He was alone at first, but help arrived, and the poor signalman was carried home. Physicians laboured on his case without avail. Around his bed were his five little children, the mother being absent in an institution, to be treated for a serious ailment. Here he lay for weeks, part of the time unconacious. Nothing was to be done but to wai for the end. Then the torpid faculties awakened. for a moment. Memory fl shed up, and he recalled the fact that a medicine which he had used with benefit years before an then thrown aside and forgotten, was concealed in a secret place at the signal box. He cent for it, and took a dose. Soon his bowels moved, the kidneys acted, the pain was eased, he felt better. With brightened hope he sent to Carlisle for more. It arrived He used it, and in a few days the doctors were astonished to find their patient out of doors, and on the road to recovery. He regained his health completely, and, in apeaking of his experience said to the writer. "What a wonderful thing it was that, on what promised to be my death-bed I anddenly remambered where I had put that half need bottle of Mother Seigel's Curative Syrup. HIDDEN FOR A STORY OF LOVE AND MYSTERY. BY G. A. RENTY. AUTHOR OF "THE CURSE OF CARRES. HOLD," GAB YEL ALLEN, M.P., " &O., &O.

CHAPTER VIII. As Miss Leicester's two brothers happened to o out to dinuer on the evening following the conversation between Hilds and Robert Harbut, she had a good opportunity for opening the sub-'Mamma, I wanted to sak Miss Corbyn to stay here for a bit." Who is Miss Corbyn, Hilds ?" Mr. Leicester "Mamma bas seen her several times, papa; she is a friend of Robert's, or I suppose I ought to say she is a client of his." Oh, has Robert got a client? That is something new. I congratulate you, Hilds." Well, she is not exactly a slient, pape, not in the ordinary way. She was introduced to him by a legal friend, or rather the case was introduced as being a most interesting one, and he is advising her. I know all about it. She has been "hamefully treated and is heiress to a fine estate if the could only prove it.".

There are a good many people who heirerses to flue estates if they could only proveit." Mr. Leicester said dryly. " However, my dear, if Robert considers her cause a good enc. no doubt there is something in it; at any rate I am sure be would not have introduced her to you had she not been a respectable young person."

Miss Leicester langhed.

"You hanr that, mother; a respectable young person. My dear papa, she is one of the most charming garle I have ever met; I am quite in love with her." "That is all very pice. Hilds; but as you have two brothers resident in the house, I really do

My dear papa, we have often had nice girls claying in the house and the boys have not lost their hearts to them . I don't think that after seven or eight years of Lineline society young men are given to falling in love hastily. "Perhaps not, Hilds; but the unexpected happens sometimes. Are you at liberty to tell us this charming young person's story ?" "No. I think not, pana: Of course, Robert.

" Of course, my dear."

"But I am sure he did not mean me to tall anybody; and I am sure she would not like it." Well, Hilds, of course I don't know why you particularly wish to ask her here, but I certainly think it had better be avoided if possible. Of donfae, if Robert approves, there is no resson why you should not be as much with her as you likes but I really do think it would be wiser not to bring her here. I am not at all supposing that your brothers would be likely to fall in love with her, still it is just as well to a void the possibility of unpleasant complications, if one can. Don't you think so, mother?" "Yes, I quite think so," Mrs. Leicester sail "I have certainly nothing to say against the young lady personally. I have only seen her twice when she has come in with Hilds, and she struck me as a particularly nice girl. Ladvliks. and quiet, and with a very bright pleasant facea sensible face, and pretty, too; but I do not think it would be quite prudent to bring her into the house." . Miss Leicester was silent.

" I will think it over," she said after a pause, and see if it can be managed some other way." Robert had agreed to come round next morning at ten c'clock to hear the result of Hilda's application. He saw at once by her face when he came in a the room that she had failed. " to you haven't been able to get your own way for once ?" he said with a smite.

"It is on account of the boys," she said rue-W. Il. dear. I really cannot blame your father and mother. One may have every belief that Miss Coroyn is the rightful owner of Corbyn Court; but as I have said, when we talked about it, our chance of proving it appears to me to be small; and if we fail, you must admit, from society's point of view, she would not be a desirable match for either of your brothers. Wo may also admit that were she to be in the house three weeks or a month, the chances are strongly in favour of one or other of them falling in love with her. You did not tell them her story,

"Of course not, Robert," any other plan ? Miss Leicester shook her head,

"I have been thinking it over, for it seemed to me likely that your people might object, and it struck me that she might go into one of those homes for governesses there are such places, I believe -for a bit. You could call for her and take her out and bave her at your place sometimes in the day and she would get on very well" "Yes, I think that would do," Hilds agreed. brightening up. Mayou say I could have her a great deal with me during the day."

" At any rate, it would take away her sense of loneliness," Robert said, "and there will be other people there whom she would go cat with. To her it would be less dull than where she is now." . He looked at his watch. "I have time to go round there before I go in Court; there is nothing like brouching the matter at once. am sure she is anxious to got something settled." Robert found Madame Duport and Constance

"I have been having a long talk with Miss Leicester about you," he began, "and told her that you want to get a place as governess or companion. She thinks you will find a companion's place much the most pleasant, if you get with a nice woman. She is going to interest herself among her friends, and will. I have no doubt, by able to find you a nost before long. She is very energetic when she takes a thing in hand; and will not be long before she persuades some one that the thing she most wants is a lady companion, and that you are the only person in the world who will suit lor. She will call this afternoon and chat it over with you hereelf; but I thought another. Their life is twenty times as happy as I might as well come and tell you at once so as

"But I am in no harry to go back." Madame Duport said. "I should like to remain with her antil she is comfortably placed." "I am sure of that, madame."
